

On the Road to Montréal . . .

• The outdoor bake-oven, many specimens of which are still to be seen along the highways of Quebec, especially in the long-settled areas of the Province along both sides of the River St. Lawrence, are among the most curious of the quaint survivals from the old regime which constantly remind the tourist that he is "abroad without crossing the seas."

• Another odd sight, rarely to be seen elsewhere, is the ancient well-sweep, similar to that used in Egypt and the Orient from time immemorial, still in use in many a farmyard . . . Yet the habitant is not quite so archaic in all his ways as might be inferred from the primitiveness of some of his possessions; often the ubiquitous flivver is parked beside the well with its sweep, and a new silo may adjoin the thatched barn built a century or more ago.

Below: An oxcart takes its place in the traffic on a sideroad.

U.S. Customs Regulations

• The law requires that every person entering the United States shall make a declaration and entry of personal baggage. The senior member of a family may, however, declare for the entire family.

Returning residents of the United States must declare all articles acquired abroad in their baggage or on their persons, whether by purchase, by gift or otherwise, and whether dutiable or free of duty. Exemption, however, will be allowed by Customs Officers of articles aggregating not over $100 in value, if suitable for personal or household use or as souvenirs or curios, and whether intended for the personal use of the passengers or as gifts or presents to others, provided the articles are not bought on commission for another person nor intended for sale. Articles so exempt from duty must, nevertheless, be declared.

Immigration Regulations

• Canada—Bona-fide citizens of the United States require no passports in entering Canada, but should be prepared to furnish evidence of identity. Cards showing membership in recognized motor clubs or associations are usually accepted for this purpose.

Foreign-born citizens and alien residents of the United States should carry credentials establishing their legal residence there.

• United States—Tourists returning from Canada to the United States should be careful to have proofs of American citizenship or right to residence in that country, as otherwise they may be denied re-entrance temporarily or even permanently.